

Join the Faculty of Archaeology, History and Letters at the British School at Rome!

The British School at Rome (BSR) invites expressions of interest for membership in the Faculty of Archaeology, History and Letters (FAHL), with up to two new members to be appointed from September 2025.

We welcome scholars whose work spans a wide range of historical periods and media. We are especially interested in those with expertise in ancient Roman language, literature, and history, or the visual and material culture of early modern Italy. However, applications from researchers in other relevant areas are also warmly encouraged.

The FAHL supports a vibrant, interdisciplinary academic community at the BSR, engaging researchers in the arts, humanities, and social sciences—across time periods from prehistory to the present. We value collaboration, intellectual exchange, and a commitment to supporting early career scholars.

We are particularly keen to broaden representation and strongly encourage applications from individuals from minoritized ethnic backgrounds and those with protected characteristics who are currently under-represented on BSR committees.

Ideal candidates will be:

- Affiliated with a UK or Italian university
- Active scholars with a strong reputation in their field
- Experienced in academic assessment and familiar with the current challenges facing their disciplines
- Committed to supporting early career researchers
- Skilled in cross-disciplinary collaboration
- Ready to take on advisory and administrative responsibilities

Members are expected to:

- Serve a five-year term starting September 2025
- Attend at least two meetings annually (typically online in March and November)
- Review and score applications for BSR awards
- Make a Faculty Visit to the BSR (costs covered) to engage with award-holders and deliver a seminar, site visit, workshop, or lecture
- Support and promote the work and activities of the BSR and its researchers

Please note that this is an honorary, non-remunerated role.

This is a unique opportunity to join a dynamic scholarly community, shape the future of Italian studies, and support the next generation of researchers and to be part of our transformative interdisciplinary community in the heart of Rome. If you are interested in committing your expertise and enthusiasm to this exciting work, we'd love to hear from you.

Apply by 26 May at <https://bsrome.slideroom.com/>