

Call for Applications:
Join the Faculty of Architecture at the British School at Rome

The British School at Rome (BSR) is inviting applications from outstanding architects to join its Faculty of Architecture. We're looking for someone with a strong reputation, with broad connections across contemporary practice, and a genuine commitment to the intellectual and creative ambitions of the BSR.

The BSR is a dynamic hub for artists, scholars, and researchers, driving innovation across the arts, architecture, archaeology, and the humanities. In the heart of Rome, it offers a setting where creativity and academic excellence meet ancient history. Inspired by the city's rich legacy, our staff and fellows collaborate across disciplines, using deep networks and expertise to shape the intellectual and creative cultures of the UK, Italy, and beyond.

As a Faculty Member, you'll play a key role in supporting and guiding the BSR's architecture programme over a five-year term.

Your contributions will include:

- Selecting recipients of the BSR's architecture awards, the Rome Scholarship in Architecture and the Giles Worsley Fellowship.
- Advising the BSR's Council and Director on matters of policy, practice, and strategic direction.
- Collaborating in academic and professional forums to enrich the BSR's work.
- Reviewing proposals for Research Fellows and evaluating the direction of architectural awards.

In addition, you'll be expected to:

- Serve on interview panels for award applicants.
- Participate in two Faculty meetings annually (typically held virtually in March and November, with occasional hybrid options).
- Take an active role in Faculty initiatives, committees, and special projects.
- Visit the BSR in Rome at least once during your term to engage with award-holders, deliver a talk, and/or lead a local site visit (travel and accommodation covered).
- Advocate for the BSR within your own networks, institutions, and the broader architectural community.

Please note that this is an honorary, non-remunerated role.

Serving on the Faculty is a unique opportunity to engage with architectural research and practice in a vibrant international setting. Join us in shaping the next chapter of the BSR's legacy.
